1. Memorability is the weakest usability metric of the menus/forms/dialogs interaction style, because these rely on recognition instead of recall. In other words, these interaction styles attempt to make a system that is easily recognizable by new users and old, while the memorability is an afterthought.

2. Symbols or icons within menus are examples of a system's memorability. Most people think of the homepage when they see a Home button in a menu, which makes that icon memorable to the user.
